Hongkong, JANUARY 5TH. 1889.

As an acounced by us in a paragraph yesterday the Hon, E. L. O'MALLEY, Attorney-General with shortly go house on leave. The new Puisne Judge will arrive at the end of this month, when Mr. A. J. LEACH, who has so ably filled the acting appointment for the last (wenty ment by, will leave the Bosch, and it is understood that he will then he select. as the Attorney-General's locum tenens is said to be probable that the Flore E. L. O'MALLEY will not return to the C loot, and that on the expire of his leave the substant tive appointment of Asternor-General wi Le come vicini. Mr. E. J. Ackr vo. now a home on love, is a candidate for the arpointment, the vacancy having been and cipated for some time past, and r is believed he has a fair chance of securing i, though doubtless there will be condistates from other colonies. The change in the incumbency of the office affords a favourable opportunity for reising the question whether the Attorney-General should be allowed private prictice. We would not be surprised to learn that the question has already lase considered by the Colonial Office and that it has been decided that in all the Cown Colonies private practice is in future to be disallowed to law officers when new at point ments are made. The point has recently been raised in England and a discussion took place upon it in the II use of C minons. The question there was who ther the Attorney-General and the Solicitor-General of England should be allowed t continue to take private practice. S HENEY JAMES, who had neted an Attorney General, from his own experience spok strongly against the prevailing custom, apsaid it was impossible for a man to attento public business and private practice at the same time, Mr. W. H. SMITH on to helf of the Government intimated that the suggeste change would be made at an early date In some of the Crown colonies private practice is already interdicted to the Asternet. General. The objections to the existing arrangement in this colony are obvi to With a large private practice the Attorney General connot give that undivided after tion to his afficial duties that is descrable. while sometimes it may cut the other we and the interests of clients have to suff Only this week the Attorney-General had a ask for an early adjournment of the Supreno Court to enable him to attend the meeting of the Leislative Council. This might don't Know What it did in this camemean the prolonging of the case by a day more than would otherwise necessary for its conclusion, thus precessing the costs prop minimately. That, however, i only a minor objection to the system; the real objection is that where private practicis allowed? the colony connot command the undivided services of the Attorney-General. Sometimes, too, in the course of civil husbness, matters containing the elements of crimmal charges may crop up, and the A torney-General be thereby placed in an enbaragaing position. There is also the possibility that as a member of the Government he may have to advise on matters in which the interests of persons from whom he bold retains a are affected, and, however desirous at h hard labour. he m y be of discharging his duth's inpartially, an unconscious bias may ff et hisjudgment.
